Investors Community Bank Ag Credit Analyst Interns gain valuable work experience

(Manitowoc, WI, June 29, 2016) -- Two students are gaining valuable career experiences at Investors Community Bank (ICB) this summer. The bank has welcomed Cassandra Haen and Cassie Borgardt as Ag Credit Analyst Interns.

The ag credit analyst internship provides hands-on learning at the bank. Responsibilities include reviewing financial statements and spreading numbers for credit reviews; completing accrual adjustments and analyzing the full picture of how Ag businesses operate; and learning the process for putting together credit presentations. Interns also spend time making site visits with lenders, portfolio managers and other credit analysts.

Haen is a student at UW – Green Bay pursuing a Bachelor’s degree in Business Administration and will graduate in December. She also holds an Associate’s degree from Fox Valley Technical College in Agricultural Business, with a double major in animal science and plant science. She works part time at ABS Global Inc. as an artificial insemination technician and milks cows at Ullmann Hill Dairy during the school year. Through her internship at ICB, she hopes to learn more about ag loan procedures and the details of what happens during the approval process, to help her with her career path direction after school.

Borgardt is currently attending UW-River Falls, majoring in Agricultural Business, and will graduate in December 2017. She was born and raised on a family farm near Oshkosh – Borgardt Farms – and has worked as a beef herd manager / farm hand there. She has also worked as milking technician at Hinz Farms. She accepted the internship at ICB because of the bank’s large ag customer base and hopes to gain a better understanding of the financial and business side of the ag industry, to help shape her future career in agriculture.
